There are hundreds of people in Oxford who believe that Mr. Carlyle, I.P.S., should be succeeded by a man who is less bearish. In the matter of dismissing an old official of that sort it is usually hard to get one who will take the initiative, and then follow the matter up. One of the Bright trustees took steps to have Mr. Carlyle dismissed, but his case seems not to have been strong enough. Judging by what we hear almost any time the matter is discussed, and that is pretty often, it should not be difficult to get together data enough to warrant county council's taking action.
